

ABSTRACT

A method for delivery of healthcare services is provided. In a facility having a first doctor assigned to a first area to provide healthcare services to patients, the inventive method includes the step of assigning a second doctor to a second area to provide healthcare services to non-emergent patients. The inventive method may further include the steps of recording the time of a patient's arrival; identifying whether the patient is emergent or non-emergent; assigning the patient to an area, based on the emergent or non-emergent status of the patient, to receive healthcare services from a doctor; reviewing the time of the doctor's examination of the patient; and providing compensation to the patient if the time of the doctor's examination is longer than a set period of time after the patient's arrival.
